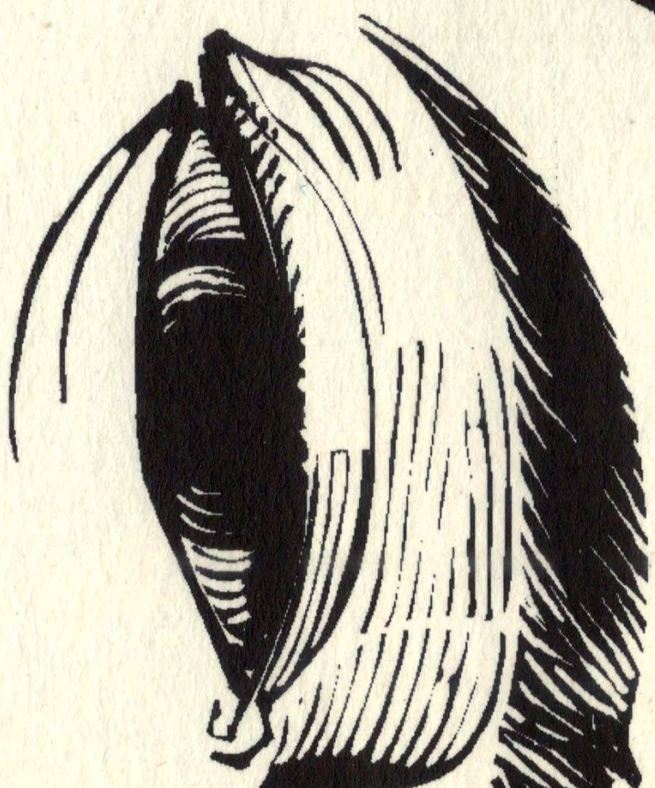
I could not see anything on that day



I was only frightened, frightened, and frightened

I was then wondering, what kind of belly that could be this wet and dark

it smells awful

it hurts to breath it

I cannot figure it out

What kind of event that expelled us one by one

So that we have to “leave immediately”

It quickly changed

The peasants were out of their farms Factory workers were out their factories
I, was out of school

Everyone was scared, restless, gloomy and angry Suspicious of each other While waiting for their turn, drowning

My name is Lusia

The tragic event in the past demolished my village Gushes of hot mud
ruined my hometown
