UNKNOWN PEOPLE

“Three poets enacting a version of Total Anarchy through bibliographic list, Flarf, concrete poetry and translated parables. A playful short read filled with politics and youthful adventure that even includes 4. (a fill in the blank).”

Nico Vassilakis

(Artist, writer, visual poet, curator and anthologist of visual poetry from New York City)

“What a delight to see this work from 3 young Indonesian experimental and visual poets! Total Anarchy is a largely bilingual edition (in one or more Indonesian languages and English) with one work, by Rifki Syarani Fachry in both, creating a wonderfully trans-linguistic text with a wide variety of sources. I hope to see more from these poets.”

PROLOGUE :

The ~~Essential~~ Solitude against Language

Once, a German phenomenologist said that, *Language is the ~~house of~~ Being. It is home human beings dwell. Those who think and those who create with words are the guardians of this home.*¹ But before human being dwell, more archaic than that, in the presence of language, human being was nothing more than a loser; there are only two choice afterwards, rebelling or dwelling.

What Rifki, Wahyu, and Ihung did in their Total Anarchy was rebellion against language, that is when the normative words oppress them. To rebel against ~~normative language~~, they enter into an absolutely singular mode of their existences, bringing their unglückliche Bewußtsein (meminjam istilah Hegel dalam The Phenomenology of Spirit), than dive into The Essential Solitude against Language.

I assume that the ideas of their writing are not a mode of lyricism, but an exercise of language, to create a language in its ~~pure absences~~; without ~~negation~~, without ~~decisions~~ (non-dialectical language, but chaotic language). It means that what was being written is the experience of RESISTANCE of language to the design that human beings place upon it, to interrupt what was being established.

EPILOGUE: ALAM PIKIRAN PASAR

Déri Hudaya*

PADA SUATU HARI yang biasa seseorang tiba-tiba melompat di tengah keramaian pasar, dan dengan suara seraknya berteriak-teriak memberitahu semua orang bahwa makna telah mati. Makna telah mati. Makna telah mati. Sejarah dan Melankoli yang mendengar itu saling pandang dengan sorot mata jalang, berpelukan dan berciuman. Teks dan Gambar di sekitar segera menanggalkan bajunya masing-masing. Religiusitas dan Kebanalan melakukan hubungan intim di atas tumpukan daging dengan berbagai macam gaya yang tidak akan pernah terpikirkan oleh Es Balok.

Pasar menjadi lebih ramai dari sebelumnya. Mesjid di sudut pasar ikut ramai juga. Fakta dan Fiksi tak bisa lagi dibedakan setelah sembahyang bersama di sana. Di pintu masuk pasar, seorang laki-laki menyatakan cintanya entah pada siapa dengan mengangkat bonteng berbentuk hati.

“Puji Tuhan!” pekik seorang pedagang yang memiliki kepala banyak bernama Interteks.

“Mari kita berpesta!” timpal pedagang bom-bunuh-diri-untuk-tidak-mati-mati bernama Dekonstruksi.

Setelah itu, semua kata yang ada di pasar itu menghilang. Kecuali kata hibrid, majemuk dan simulasi.

Satpam yang setia pada tugasnya dalam menjaga ketertiban pasar kerap memuntahkan isi perutnya setiap kali mendengar ketiga kata itu. Tapi pasar itu tidak pernah tutup. Kehidupan pasar terus berlanjut. Bahkan bertambah cepat. Semakin cepat dan tak bisa dikejar lagi kawanan semut. Sebab masa depan pun telah bertukar dengan masa lalu. Semut hanya bisa menikmati muntahan satpam.

Rifki dan Wahyu sering bertemu di pasar itu untuk bertukar kacamata, membuat dokumentasi, atau menulis puisi. Aneh menurut sebagian orang. Wajar bagi sebagian orang. Dan Ihung yang tidak berkacamata sering juga datang ke pasar yang sama, bahkan telah lebih lama berlangganan menulis puisi bahasa Sunda di sana. Setiapkali mengunjungi tempat itu, Ihung selalu mengenakan pakaian khas seorang santri.
